Harrisburg's Damion Barber says he is set for Penn State arrival after missing June report date

Harrisburg's Damion Barber says he's cleared up his academic issues and expects to enroll at Penn State on Wednesday, almost two months after the rest of the freshman class reported.

Barber, a defensive end, sent PennLive a message Monday, hours after he tweeted: "two more days left in the [Harris]burg."

Earlier this month, James Franklin said Barber's arrival was imminent after reports surfaced in June that he was finishing some classwork.

Advertisement

"Yeah, we're confident that Damion's going to be here," Franklin said Aug. 5 at media day. "We've got great feed[...]t. is week. So we're really confident that Damion will be here." Set  Subscribe

"The problem is, once you set your 105 by the NCAA rule, it's not like you can pull a guy off of it and sub a guy in. It's not like the NFL where you're getting on the waiver wires and changing guys.

"So we have some challenges when it comes to that, but the most important thing is will he be here before school starts? And we're pretty confident that that will happen."

Penn State's fall semester begins Aug. 21.

Barber was included on the Nittany Lions' 2017 media guide roster, which was released July 24 at Big Ten Media Days, but is not listed on the team's electronic roster, which was dated July 30. In the media guide, he was assigned the

No. 90 and listed at 6-foot-3, 245 pounds, the same height and weight the former 247Sports' Composite four-star was at when he signed back in February.

It was not clear if Barber could begin practicing immediately; according to a downloadable version of the NCAA rulebook from August 2016, FBS programs are limited to 105 student-athletes "who may engage in practice activities prior to the institution's first day of classes or the institution's first contest, whichever occurs earlier," but there appears to be no limitations related to the in-season roster. It's also not clear if Penn State currently has 105 student-athletes engaging in fall camp, which is now into the double-digits in terms of number of practices held.

Advertisement

Word of Barber's delayed arrival first broke back in mid-June when DKPittsburghSports.com reported from the Big 33 game that he wouldn't be starting the school's second summer semester.

"I gotta do some classwork, some college courses," Barber said on June 13. "I've already gradua^{Sat} but I've gotta some of my college courses and ^{Weather} get up there on July 30."

Meet the Penn State football freshmen who are arriving on campus this weekend

Meet the new guys

Penn State commit Sean Clifford visits during the annual Blue-White game at Beaver Stadium on April 22, 2017. Joe Hermitt | jhermitt@pennlive.com

Penn State is expected to welcome 16 new Nittany Lions to campus this weekend, as the second summer semester starts next Wednesday, meaning the fresh faces that signed back in February are ready to kick off their careers in blue and white.

In total, 21 players inked their name on a Penn State National Letter of Intent a few months back, but four -- corner Lamont Wade, lineman Mike Miranda, receiver K.J. Hamler, and linebacker Brelin Faison-Walden -- enrolled in January and received the full benefit of spring ball, while Harrisburg High end Damion Barber, a three-star, won't be on campus until at least late July due to needing to take additional classes.

It leaves this group as the one that is set to kick off their Nittany Lions career. Who are they and what can they do? A rundown is below.

QB Sean Clifford

Penn State football head coach James Franklin straightens the banner for Penn State quarterback recruit Sean Clifford during the 2017 National Signing Day in State College, Pa., Feb. 1, 2017. Mark Pynes | mpynes@pennlive.com

Tale of the tape

Cincinnati, Ohio St. Xavier

6-foot-1, 211 pounds

Consensus four-star

What he brings to the table

Clifford was a class leader for the Nittany Lions top-15 nationally ranked class. He committed early and stayed true to his word when a tough September had some thinking about going elsewhere. A shoulder injury hurt his abilities as a senior, but he seems to be on the healing track, though more time is likely needed before he is 100 percent.

"That guy is a winner," head coach James Franklin said.

Tommy Stevens, Jake Zembiec. We're starting to get winners stockpiled at that position, every position.

That's one of the things we didn't have when we got here, was depth and competition at every position. That's going to make for an exciting spring. That's going to make for an exciting fall. I'm really looking forward to it."

RB Journey Brown

Meadville's Journey Brown wins the AAA boys 100 meter dash during day 2 of the 2017 PIAA track and field championships at Shippensburg University. Sean Simmers | ssimmers@pennlive.com May 27, 2017

Meadville, Pa.

5-foot-11, 194 pounds

Consensus three-star

What he brings to the table

Brown, as you might have guessed by the track photo above, will bring a major infusion of speed into the program. He broke the longtime PIAA record in the 100 meter dash in the state finals back in May, and his size is closer to that of Saquon Barkley and Miles Sanders at the position. He could be a return candidate from day one.

"I knew right when Penn State was going to offer me, I was going to say yes," he told PennLive in May. "I'd been down there, I was at the Ohio State game, and what a better selling point than that? For me to look at it, I want to learn from Saquon [Barkley]. He, in my opinion, is one of my favorite running backs everywhere, and just to try to learn from one of the best to ever go through, and he's going to go to the league, and that's everybody's dream if you play football in college."

"Who better to learn from than Saquon? I can't wait to go up there and put in that work."

WR Cam Sullivan-Brown

Penn State commit Cameron Sullivan-Brown visits during the annual Blue-White game at Beaver Stadium on April 22, 2017. Joe Hermitt | jhermitt@pennlive.com

Tale of the tape

Bowie, Md.

6-foot, 180 pounds

Consensus three-star

What he brings to the table

"He's a big, physical guy," head coach James Franklin said on Signing Day. "Really good ball skills. What I love about him and all of our prospects is you watch his tape, not only does he make plays on the offensive side of the ball, but the defensive side of the ball. Really the guys we recruit should dominate high school football on both sides of the ball. He does that."

What more do you want to know? He is a competitor with a wide skill set that he will define in blue and white.

WR Mac Hippenhammer

Penn State recruit Mac Hippenhammer visits during the annual Blue-White game at Beaver Stadium on April 22, 2017. Joe Hermitt | jhermitt@pennlive.com

Tale of the tape

Fort Wayne, Ind., Snider

5-foot-11, 170 pounds

Consensus three-star

What he brings to the table

Hippenhammer, also a baseball star (unclear if he'll actually play both in blue and white) is also a special teams candidate out of the gate, depending on how he shows up on campus and how long it takes him to adjust. Per Franklin:

"Hippenhammer had as good of a year as anybody in the country returning punts and kicks. Really, really successful. Tremendous feet. Really, really polished already as a wide receiver. He needs to get bigger and stronger."

Whether he does or not should decide his outcome as a freshman.

OL C.J. Thorpe

Pittsburgh Central Catholic's C.J. Thorpe participates in a ceremonial signing of his national letter of intent to play football at Penn State on national signing day at the school's campus in Oakland on Wednesday, Feb. 1, 2017. Barry Reeger | Special to PennLive

Tale of the tape

Pittsburgh Central Catholic

6-foot-3, 314 pounds

Consensus four-star

What he brings to the table

Thorpe is a man-child, dominating some of western PA's best high school football talent game in and game out, making him one of the best gets for the Nittany Lions in this cycle.

He projects as a guard in college, and while some might think his massive frame could lead to him getting on the field right away, playing freshman lineman is usually not ideal, and considering how PSU has recruited the position over the last three cycles, there should be no need to rush him into action.

OL Robert Martin

Penn State recruit Robert Martin visits during the annual Blue-White game at Beaver Stadium on April 22, 2017. Joe Hermitt | jhermitt@pennlive.com

Tale of the tape

Sparta, N.J., St. Joe's Regional

5-foot-4, 275 pounds

Consensus three-star

What he brings to the table

Martin could be a guard or could be a tackle at the next level; it all depends on how he fills out in college, which by the way, makes him a sure-fire redshirt candidate.

"Then Rob is blue-collar, hard-nosed. His high school coach played in the NFL. Great high school program. He's a swing guy that can play multiple positions," Franklin said. "I'm really excited about Robert because he doesn't have a hair on his face. His face, looks like he's about 14 years old. He's about 275 pounds right now. He has so much room for growth.

"When he decides to start growing some facial hair and fill out, I think we're going to have a chance to get a guy who has got a really, really big upside."

OT Des Holmes

Desmond Holmes, of Cardinal O'Hara, has his photo taken with Jordan Hill. The Big 33 Pennsylvania football team meets NFL player Jordan Hill at Central Dauphin Middle School, June 16, 2017. .Dan Gleiter | dgleiter@pennlive.com

Tale of the tape

Norristown, Pa., Cardinal O'Hara

6-foot-5, 325 pounds

Consensus three-star

What he brings to the table

He projects to be a mauler, but he may need time to improve his technique and put on the kind of weight needed to go against the Big Ten's best. From Franklin:

"Des Holmes is a guy that came to camp. Massive human being. His dad and brother played basketball. His dad played in the PSAC, basketball player. Massive kid."

His high school did a great job of turning that place around. You're talking about a 6-foot-5, 320-pound kid with really light feet. Hadn't really showed it to the point on film yet. But I think after camp, we felt really

His senior year I thought was really good. We talked to him about finishing people, playing with a toughness. I thought he really showed that his senior year."

DE Yetur Gross-Matos

Penn State recruit Yetur Matos visits during the annual Blue-White game at Beaver Stadium on April 22, 2017. Joe Hermitt | jhermitt@pennlive.com

Tale of the tape

Spotsylvania, Va., Chancellor

6-foot-5, 242 pounds

Consensus four-star

What he brings to the table

Gross-Matos is one of the class' prized gets, a four-star with offers from all over and a resume that says he tore up his high school competition and projects to have the potential to do the same in college. He could be a year one guy, but probably not.

"He's got the body you're looking for," Franklin said. "Really good student, really good family. As he keep watching this guy play, he's a guy that I think -- to be honest with you, I know this sounds ridiculous, but you say the sleeper of the class. He may be the sleeper of the class. I know he's a four-star recruit, all that kind of stuff."

DT Corey Bolds

Penn State recruit Corey Bolds visits for the Iowa game at Beaver Stadium on Nov. 5, 2016. Penn State beat Iowa, 41-14. Joe Hermitt | jhermitt@pennlive.com

Tale of the tape

Paterson, N.J., Paramus Catholic

6-foot-3, 280 pounds

Consensus three-star

What he brings to the table

Bolds was one of the latest prospects to sign with the Nittany Lions in this cycle as he worked hard and eventually did get his academic house in order. Can he play from the get-go?

"We have a need at defensive tackle," Franklin said. "We lost some guys to the transfer process. Corey Bolds is a guy we recruited really early on. Once his mom and him got on campus, it changed completely. We got some commitments. Corey stayed patient. We just kept talking. I really got to know him really well from a great high school. Coach Rahne did a really good job. Coach Spencer. We're jacked about having that guy."

"You talk about a big, physical, strong, athletic guy that's going to have a chance to come in and compete, we're really excited."

DT Fred Hansard

Penn State recruits Tariq Castro-Fields and Fred Hansard visit during the annual Blue-White game at Beaver Stadium on April 22, 2017. Joe Hermitt | jhermitt@pennlive.com

6-foot-3, 300 pounds

Consensus four-star

What he brings to the table

A one-time Florida commit, Hansard flipped to the Lions late in the season and stuck with his pledge. He, like Bolds, could jump into the rotation right away.

"I'm just excited to get to Penn State and build a legacy there," Hansard said in a press release issued by the school on National Signing Day. "This is the best decision of my life."

LB Ellis Brooks

Virginia four-star linebacker Ellis Brooks poses with former Penn State linebacker Lavar Arrington at the Under Armour All-American game.

Tale of the tape

Mechanicsville, Va., Benedictine

6-foot-1, 230 pounds

Consensus four-star

What he brings to the table

Case 4:20-cv-00064-MWB Document 27-1 Filed 04/07/20 Page 30 of 57
Brooks was an Under Armour All-American and a guy Penn State came into the mix for but landed despite that fact once four-star Dylan Rivers flipped to Virginia Tech. Brooks could battle for playing time out of the gate.

"Fortunately with Ellis, we were able to get in there and get in his home," Franklin said. "Really, really sharp kid, sharp family. What I would characterize as a Penn State kid and a Penn State family."

LB Brailyn Franklin

Tale of the tape

6-foot-1, 204 pounds

Arlington Tex., (listed home town), played at Battlefield High in Haymarket, Va.

Consensus three-star

What he brings to the table

Is he a linebacker or a safety? That's what Brent Pry and Tim Banks will have to decide ASAP once Franklin gets on campus and begins filling out. He was listed at LB in February.

"I chose Penn State because the school itself is very good with academics and coach James Franklin is doing terrific things with the program, and I like how Coach Pry plays his linebackers," Brailyn Franklin told PennLive when he committed.

CB Donovan Johnson

Penn State recruit Donovan Johnson visits during the annual Blue-White game at Beaver Stadium on April 22, 2017. Joe Hermitt | jhermitt@pennlive.com

Tale of the tape

Detroit, Mich., Cass Tech

5-foot-9, 170 pounds

Consensus four-star

What he brings to the table

An injury to John Reid that is likely to keep him out for most of if not the entire season could give Johnson a chance to jump into the rotation as a first-year player, but it's more likely that he sits out and sharpens his skills and mans the scout team in year one.

He'll be on to keep a close eye on throughout the summer.

CB Tariq Castro-Fields

Penn State recruit Tariq Castro-Fields during the annual Blue-White game at Beaver Stadium on April 22, 2017. Joe Hermitt | jhermitt@pennlive.com

Tale of the tape

Upper Marlboro, Md., Riverdale Baptist

5-foot, 185 pounds

Consensus four-star

Penn State recruit DJ Brown visits for the Ohio State game on Oct. 22, 2016 Joe Hermitt |
jhermitt@pennlive.com

Tale of the tape

College Park, Ga., Creekside

5-foot-10, 175 pounds

Consensus three-star

One of the signing class' earliest commitments, Brown worked to improve his game instead of focusing on other schools during his senior year of high school, and now he's primed to build on that as a freshman.

"I've improved greatly not only physically but also mentally," Brown told PennLive in January. "I've gotten a little bigger, stronger and faster till this point," adding that "learning how to study the game better and dominate mentally" was also a big focus.

S Jonathan Sutherland

Penn State commit Jonathan Sutherland during the annual Blue-White game at Beaver Stadium on April 22, 2017. Joe Hermitt | jhermitt@pennlive.com

Tale of the tape

From Ottawa but played at Episcopal High in Virginia

5-foot-11, 191 pounds

Consensus four-star

Last but certainly not least on our rundown, Sutherland camped at Penn State around the time he started high school but didn't really talk much about the program until right before he committed. He's a hard-hitting, impact playmaker that just might have something to say about the safety spot vacated next to Marcus Allen. A summer name to watch.

And that's the class. Stay tuned for more updates throughout the weekend and days to come as this group settles in.

Who are Penn State football's early enrollees, and will all play as freshmen? They begin Monday

The Penn State spring semester starts on Jan. 8, which means six new Nittany Lions are about to begin their academic and athletic careers.

Case 4:20-cv-00064-MWB Document 27-1 Filed 04/07/20 Page 46 of 57
It's one of the biggest January enroilee classes that the program has had in quite some time, and includes players from Texas and Pennsylvania.

"I think as you guys have seen, we've played freshmen, and whether that's guys that graduated early and came in December or come in the summer, they're going to have an opportunity to compete," head coach James Franklin said back in December.

"I do think the chances and the likelihood increase, obviously, the longer that they're here and in this system. So that will be interesting."

Here's an in-depth look at the six newcomers, and what the odds are for each to play as a true freshman.

CB Trent Gordon

Hometown: Spring, Tex.

High School: Manvel

Consensus three-star

6-foot, 180 pounds

Penn State coaches James Franklin, Tim Banks, and Terry Smith with Trent Gordon.

How he ended up at Penn State

Gordon unofficially visited schools like Ohio State, Michigan, and Tennessee during his recruitment, but he saw no school as often as he did the Nittany Lions, and that eventually led him to pick Penn State on March 29, 2016.

He never wavered.

"When Penn State offered at first, I didn't know much about them, the offers were just all coming in still," Gordon told Rivals Nick Krueger.

'As the weeks went on and they kept contacting me and I found out more about them, I realized this was actually a powerhouse school. That's when I started falling in love with them."

Will he play as a true freshman?

It seems unlikely.

The Lions do lose Grant Haley and Christian Campbell at the position, but John Reid is back, as is Amani Oruwariye, and Tariq Castro-Fields and Lamont Wade are waiting in the wings for more reps, among others.

Don't rule it out, as special teams help can always be a boon, but don't expect it, either.

S Isaiah Humphries

Consensus three-star

Hometown: Rowlett, Tex.

High School: Sachse High

5-foot-11, 190 pounds

The son of former Nittany Lion Leonard, Humphries was offered in February of 2016, camped at Penn State in July of the same year, and then committed to the Nittany Lions on New Year's Eve just days before the Lions took on USC in the Rose Bowl.

He also never looked around, despite schools like Notre Dame coming into the fold after he pledged.

"It has the perfect combo of academics and football, and the recruiting class is excellent plus just the whole game day experience is unreal," Isaiah Humphries told PennLive.

Will he play as a true freshman?

The battle to replace Marcus Allen and Troy Apke as Penn State's two starting safeties is wide open, meaning Humphries could well muscle his way into a mix that currently includes Nick Scott, Ayron Monroe, Jonathan Sutherland, Garrett Taylor, and others.

If he doesn't make the rotation, it's safe to assume that he won't make the field in 2018, either.

TE Zack Kuntz

Consensus four-star

Hometown: Camp Hill, Pa.

High School: Camp Hill

6-foot-7, 235 pounds

Zack Kuntz

Kuntz has seen two family members, Brandon and Christian, attend University Park, and so many figured he'd be the latest in the family line to play for the Lions.

Notre Dame was one of the other heavy contenders for the Mid-Penn star, but a month and two weeks after an unofficial visit to South Bend, Kuntz verbally committed to the Lions and never looked back.

"I'm training every day, just trying to get bigger, faster and stronger," Kuntz said in December when he signed.

"I'm putting on the pounds, but it's good weight. I'm trying to keep my speed, and stay explosive."

Will he play as a true freshman?

Someone has to replace Mike Gesicki, and Kuntz could be in line to do so, or at least be a part of a rotation that does so, but as he says, adding weight is the key, and will more or less be the deciding element in whether he can suit up this year or not.

We'll say it's very likely that one of he or June arrival Pat Freiermuth do, but it's hard to pick which this far away from summer camp.

LB Jesse Luketa

Consensus three-star

Hometown: Ottawa, Ontario

High School: Erie Mercyhurst Prep

5-foot-2, 240 pounds

How he ended up at Penn State

Penn State has had a few Canadian-born players on its roster; think back to quarterback Michael O'Connor, and the latest is the aforementioned Sutherland.

It played a role, undoubtedly, but defensive coordinator Brent Pry and the staff and school as a whole were the biggest selling points to the future middle linebacker.

'Penn State is a historic institution and being presented with the opportunity to continue the legacy, it hit me,' Luketa said when he was offered.

That feeling carried over into his commitment, too.

Will he play as a true freshman?

With Jason Cabinda, Brandon Smith, and Manny Bowen all out the door this offseason, Penn State will have to rely on someone to plug the run in the middle of Pry's defense. The coordinator said many will receive a chance in spring practice to earn the job or at least snaps at the position. Like Humphries, if Luketa does not earn them, he's likely to redshirt barring an injury that forces him into action.

LB Micah Parsons

Consensus five-star

Hometown: Harrisburg, Pa.

High School: Harrisburg High

6-foot-3, 245 pounds

How he ended up at Penn State

Parsons had one of the more unique recruitment in this cycle, as he was coveted by top programs across the country, once verbally committed to the Nittany Lions, and then backed away from that pledge to explore other options.

Ohio State was one the favorite, and a point in time Nebraska, Alabama, and Georgia were all in the mix, but PSU won out in the end and earned his signature during the early signing period.

"We're going to play Micah Parsons at Mike linebacker this spring and see how that goes," Franklin said.

"We know he can move back to defensive end. But we're going to have him here for spring ball and see if he can do that. Right now we don't have a defensive end committed in the class."

Will he play as a true freshman?

The answer is yes, and the only uncertainty seems to revolve around what position he'll be at.

As noted above, the Lions want to try him at and think he can play at middle linebacker in 2018, but what if spring and summer practices indicate that he cannot?

Perhaps a move to outside linebacker will be contemplated, and there's also the possibility that he'll simply return to the end spot he has dominated at so often throughout his career.

LB Nick Tarburton

Consensus four-star

Hometown: Green Lane, Pa.

High school: Pennridge

6-foot-3, 250 pounds

Joe Hermitt | jhermitt@pennlive.com

How he ended up at Penn State

Tarburton's recruitment had hardly started when he picked Penn State back in February of 2017; he had just a handful of offers, and the last one he received, from the Nittany Lions on Jan. 29, was the one he had been waiting for, as he committed roughly 10 days later and never looked elsewhere.

"Coach [James] Franklin has talked about that with him, and he said you get bigger, we'll put you down at defensive end and he's certainly up for that," Pennridge coach Jeff Hollenbach said.

"He wants his first shot at linebacker, but I could also see him as a rush end."

Will he play as a true freshman?

It's not an impossible situation, as Tarburton is built well, but in a way his physical presence at this point could prove to be a small problem in the sense that, by the time the coaching staff decides whether it wants him to weigh what a linebacker weighs or grow into a defensive end, he may not have enough time to reach either point in time to play in 2018.

All January enrollees have a shot to play, however, but Tarburton looks like a redshirt candidate.
